Footpaths to Drovers Wood.

I refer to the article in the Winter Edition of Stonehouse News.

In addition to the approach from Verney fields, there are, as you know, various footpaths to the wood from the fields to the rear of Cotswold Green.

Over the last 12 years I have often used the footpaths to walk my dog through the wood, sometimes returning through Verney fields, although there are numerous routes which can be taken to complete the walk.

Although not everyone enters the wood itself the footpaths are used daily by a regular band of dog walkers and various other visitors.

The views from all sides of the wood are fantastic and it certainly needs to be properly maintained so that future generations can enjoy it as we have.

Sincerely

Dear Sir/Madam,

In reply to your Doverow Hill usage survey, my wife and I walk up the Verney field and either down Grove field or along the base of the woods and down and back along the level for the good of our health, to look at flowers and to enjoy the scenery.
On average, I would say we do this once a week when the ground is dry, and at least once a month otherwise.

We also take our grandchildren
up there as they love to play in the old quarry, and would take them there to sledge if there was snow! For years we walked our dogs there.

Yours faithfully,

~~John~~

P.S. We have lived in Stonehouse since 1983.
